

Personal Portfolio web app

by Georgi Hristov
for COMP4711

A plain static web portfolio may be acceptable in most professions, but as an aspiring developer I want my portfolio to do work for me. The portfolio will be in the form of a web app because that makes it accessible by everyone. There will be four pages plus a home page and login and sign up pages. The four main pages are:

- Projects
- Messages
- Meetings
- Blog

Certain restrictions will be imposed on the exposed messages and meetings based on viewer, for this reason a login system will have to be implemented. This dynamic portfolio is meant as a sort of dashboard to coordinate my interactions with the rest of the world, perhaps my front page

Use cases

Each page listed above has a use case associated with it.

Projects

In this use case a potential employer or future contributor to one of my projects may browse and review my most recent projects. Anyone can browse my projects. The projects will be showcased with snapshots, a description of the project and my most recent commits.

Messages

This use case is intended for registered users. Anyone who wishes to contact me may do so using this use case. A user may leave a standalone message (note) or start a topical conversation with me.

Meetings

This use case is also intended for registered users. Those who wish to schedule a meeting with me may do so using this use case. A user may submit details for a meeting, which will then be either approved or rejected with a suggested date and location.

Blog

Anyone who wishes to read about my opinions may do so through this use case.
